

----- Forwarded message -----

Date: Wed, 07 Apr 1999 21:15:42 +0400

From: Austin Clarkson <clarkson@yorku.ca>

To: Jeff Cupchik <jcupchik@yorku.ca>

Subject: Re: Reference

Hi Jeff:

Thanks very much for the reference.

And congratulations once again for a fine presentation this afternoon. The genuine respect and devotion you have for the Tibetan tradition and for the teaching of Mr. Rabgey provided us a model of how traditions are sustained. I am sure that when you have completed this cycle of your studies, you will also become a valuable teacher. Your singing with him was very moving.

It was a privilege to meet Mr. Rabgey, of whom I have heard since the early seventies. You made a fine choice of him as a teacher.

With thanks for having brought him to the campus.

Austin Clarkson

The TIBETAN MONKS of
SERA MEY MONASTERY
at Harvard University

FEATURING:

WELCOME RECEPTION

An evening of food & friends to meet the monks informally. Tuesday, May 30 at 7pm in the Quincy House Junior Common Room (58 Plympton Street; on the corner of Mt. Auburn and Plympton Streets).

PUBLIC CHANT & TEACHING ON MEDITATION

Nine Round Wind Breathing Meditation Technique.

The abbot and distinguished Buddhist scholar, Venerable Geshe Khen Rinpoche, gives a teaching on Buddhist meditation practice aimed at purifying the three poisons – attachment, anger and ignorance – that collect in the body's three main channels. The teaching will be preceded by the monks' chanting and will be followed by a Question & Answer period.

Wednesday, May 31 at 7:30pm at the Harvard Divinity School.

Contact: 493-3179 or rabgey@fas.harvard.edu